On behalf of International Spinal Cord Society, I extend a whole hearted invitation to all of you to participate in the Annual Scientific meeting in Nice, France from 5th to 7th November, 2019. The venue has been chosen after careful deliberations taking into consideration accessibility, conferencing facilities, accommodation, social and financial factors.

The ISCoS Annual Scientific meeting has been progressively setting higher standards and is gradually becoming the hub for scientific deliberations for all disciplines concerned with SCI management. We are sure the 2019 meeting will have a great scientific program which will kindle the minds of all the participants for finding better and newer techniques for spinal cord injury management and research.

An ISCoS Annual Scientific Meeting is being held in France after a long gap (the last one was held in 1979). We are sure you will all look forward to an unforgettable experience that will combine the latest scientific advances with excellent opportunities for fruitful discussions and cultural exchanges in a unique French atmosphere backed by gastronomic delights.

Hence please block the dates in your calendar, keep a track of the event and prepare your best scientific work for presentations, posters or workshops.
